Hi, this is Nigel with the LA Times.

Three quick questions after today's conference call:

1. Have you or will you – and when – measure the water level inside Bonita Mountain?
2. To clarify, Sunnyside mine/Kinross has categorically denied any responsibility. Is it possible for them to know that?
3. I asked and wanted to clarify the Superfund question: How close has this area been to a Superfund designation? I mean by that, were there any preliminary designations made? Were there any conditions under which it would have become a Superfund site? And are you closer today to proposing that it become a Superfund site after the spill?

Thanks,

Nigel
